

Utah Legislature

OFFICIAL CITATION RECOGNIZING

Spencer McLaughlin, Curtis Bristol, Stockton Haws, and Caleb Chilcutt

The Utah Legislature recognizes Spencer McLaughlin, Curtis Bristol, Stockton Haws, and Caleb Chilcutt as outstanding young leaders whose vision, initiative, and civic commitment will lead to the establishment of Utah Civic Engagement and Service Day.

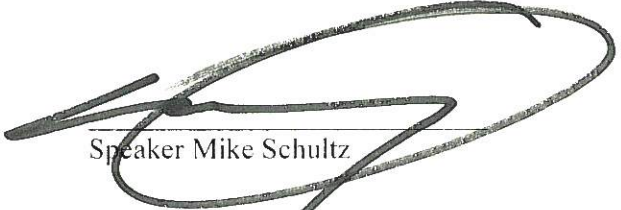

At a time when civic disengagement and division are often noted, these young men chose action. They studied the legislative process, built thoughtful support, engaged respectfully with policymakers, and demonstrated what constructive citizenship looks like in practice.

Their efforts affirm that civic engagement belongs to every Utahn willing to participate thoughtfully, serve generously, and work toward meaningful solutions. By advocating for a day dedicated to service and constructive dialogue, they advanced an idea that calls citizens across the state to embrace service, conversation, and unity.

Through their leadership, Utah Civic Engagement and Service Day will stand as a lasting reminder that communities grow stronger when citizens invest in one another and take responsibility for the health of their civic institutions. Their example demonstrates that even a small group of committed individuals can shape the culture and future of a state.

Now, therefore, be it known on this 20th day of February 2026, the Utah Legislature commends Spencer McLaughlin, Curtis Bristol, Stockton Haws, and Caleb Chilcutt for their vision, diligence, and dedication to strengthening civic life in Utah, and expresses its sincere appreciation for their leadership and example.
